MESSAGE

Pinarayi Vijayan

Chief Minister, Kerala

Kerala has made a significant shift in its communications platforms to handheld devices, owing to a surplus of mobile connections and smart phones. Hence today, phone numbers and email ids do not merely facilitate communication, but form an extension of a person's identity itself.

As the first state in the country to declare the internet a right to its citizens, Kerala is witnessing drastic changes in its communications scenario. We have already setup close to 2,000 free WiFi spots in public spaces across the State. Through the K-Fone project, all our homes and offices are being connected to an optical fiber network as well. Thus, we are emerging as a digital society.

The Government of Kerala is broadening its information dissemination methods, in accordance to the technological advancements in our society as a whole. Information regarding our various welfare schemes, development projects and services, is being shared with all sections of Kerala's society.

In this age of citizen journalism empowered by smart phones and mobile devices, common people can also share news. Wide proliferation of news makes fact checking essential, especially in this era of post – truth politics, and clickbait journalism.

Media will have to verify the accuracy and authenticity of stories that emerge with the concerned official and authorities. Similarly, the Government will also have to share verified facts and figures with media houses. The Media Handbook and its mobile app 'PRD Media Handbook' will successfully facilitate this exercise. I hope it will smoothen and streamline the exchange of information between the Government and the media.

Wish you all a happy and prosperous New Year.

MESSAGE

U V Jose IAS

Director, I&PRD, Kerala

Media is the prime means of information dissemination for any Government. In a state like Kerala with complete literacy and a unique media saturation, it is more significant. Realising this, the Government is always keen on maintaining a warm relationship with the media and assuring facilities and welfare of media people, both working, non-working and retired. Pension schemes, free travel of accredited journalists in KSRTC buses, press tours, financial supports to press clubs etc. have become models for other states.

The Media Handbook is a major initiative of our Government to provide the contacts of almost all key news sources in the Government to the media and a wide database of our journalists to the Government. Both are very vital to the public also. Since 2018, it has been made available at your fingertips through the mobile app 'PRD Media Handbook'.

As the head of I&PRD which is successfully bridging the Government with both the media and the public, I am happy to bring out this 2020 edition of the Media Handbook. I urge you all to install the mobile app 'PRD Media Handbook' for an easily accessible and updated information throughout the year. Hope our media friends will make use of this to verify all news regarding the Government before publishing to avoid misinformation and confusion.

With warm New Year greetings.
